

CONQUERING THE COMPLEXITY OF BECOMING BROADCOM/CA FREE

As many Broadcom/CA customers grasp what the acquisition by Broadcom means to their business, a few things are clear* during the renewal process:

1. The increase in renewal rate is surprising
2. There is a lack of a defined roadmap for future product development for those already utilizing their platform and products
3. Customer support is starting to show cracks, and impacting on-going support

So where do you go from here? Back to the drawing board? Well, any transition away from Broadcom/CA can seem like a daunting and arduous task to take-on, especially when IT teams are already working on strategic initiatives like digital transformation, remote worker support, and just keeping things running in these unprecedented times.

Businesses are often fearful of the perceived complexity of migrating to become Broadcom/CA free, but also may not fully understand that seamless migration can be achieved with zero business disruption. To achieve such a seamless migration, businesses and IT teams need to identify and understand that with the right vendor or software partner migration can be painless and experience savings versus renewing a solution that has increasing costs. The financial impact to the business of just renewing for fear of complexity, may be costlier than migrating to a better solution. It's time that your business breaks free from Broadcom.
